

Development Internship

Have a passion for civic engagement? Want to make sure young people's voices are heard in the political process? Welcome to the team! The MOVE Texas Development Internship provides the opportunity to build professional fundraising skills, meet local elected officials, acquire nonprofit job experience, and help fund the movement. The Development Internship is offered in San Antonio.

What You'll Do:

- Help maintain donor relations by drafting correspondence, preparing briefing memos, and managing MOVE's database
- Draft grant applications, identify target foundations and their relationship networks, and prepare materials for program officers
- Manage organization-wide communications through drafting membership updates and fundraising appeal language
- Learn directly from elected officials, community leaders, and public professionals while building your own professional network
- Research and discuss political and social issues to develop deep organizing skills
- Work 10-15 unpaid hours per week, including occasional nights and weekends

What You'll Get:

- College-level credit (per your education institution's requirements)
- First class development experience – former MOVE Texas Fellows and Interns are running political campaigns, working for elected officials, managing nonprofit teams, and interning in Washington, D.C.
- A first-hand understanding of the political process in Texas

What You'll Need:

- A completed Internship Application, available on our website
- Your class schedule (if applicable) submitted to alyssa@movetexas.org
- If you would like (not mandatory), you may also submit your resume to alyssa@movetexas.org
